Will appear in the September/October 2007 Issue

How the Magazine Originated

(Excerpt from the first issue of the Magazine, January 1929)

During the annual conference of the Central Region at Des Moines in April 1928, representative of the Meredith Publishing Company of that city expressed a desire to give some sort of assistance to the cause of agricultural education. It occurred to certain members of the conference that the company might be willing to assist with a teachers' publication. The company's managers were approached and before the close of the conference a proposal for publishing was submitted to a committee from the conference, headed by Z. M. Smith of Indiana. The conference unanimously approved the proposed arrangement and authorized a continuance of the committee, instructing it to bring the matter before the professional people of the other regions.

The committee then outlined a proposed set-up for the management of the project.

An editing-managing board was tentatively suggested, to serve for one year, and from its numbers there was chosen an editor, a consulting editor, and a secretary-treasurer. The chairman of the regional committee then submitted to each member of the executive committee of the American Vocational Association the proposal of the publishers and the committee's proposal as to managing personnel for the first year. All members but one of the executive committee responded and all who answered were favorable to both proposals.

The committee then proceeded to sound out the state supervisors of agricultural education. All of these men responded and none objected to the arrangement. Most supervisors were enthusiastic in its support, and the estimates as to probable number of subscribers from their own states indicated that the project would succeed.

The original Board of Editors included: Paul W. Chapman, State Director of Vocational Education for Georgia; R. W. Gregory, Itinerant Teacher Trainer for Indiana; R. W. Heim, State Director of Vocational Education for Delaware; J. H. Pearson, Nebraska State Supervisor of Agricultural Education; H. M. Skidmore, Teacher Trainer, Agriculture, University of California, Davis; W. F. Stewart, Head of Department of Agricultural Education, The Ohio State University; Z. M. Smith, State Director of Vocational Education, Indiana; H. M. Hamlin, Associate Professor of Agricultural Education at the Iowa State College; and F. E. Moore, State Director of Vocational Education, Iowa.
